

Goals:

AFDECE (Association française d'éducation comparée et des échanges = French Association of Comparative Education and Exchanges) has been created in 1998.

We aim to play an active part in the present development of comparative education in France and in the world, by getting interested in the benefits that the educational system can get and in the role of the exchanges among schools, junior and high schools as well as universities.

The internationalization of educational problems, the importance of worldwide reflections on intercultural relationships and on all the issues of identity must now be the responsibility of as many people as possible, whatever their position in the system. Thus, AFDECE wants to be a meeting place for theories and practices, academics and teachers, administrative officers and pedagogues, for all actors of the comparative education in the world.

AFDECE intends to make available, to all those interested in the problems of comparative education and exchanges, bibliographic information and practices as well as research in comparative education that could help them in a process that cannot be solitaire; Mostly, AFDECE want to offer international forum in accordance to the same field of our concerns.

An Internet website is at their disposal; international symposiums help provide an update on different subjects of our studies.

In order to make all this meaningful, we should be numerous. Also, AFDECE invite the colleagues interested in comparative education, in the internationalization of educational problems, and the development of schools and universities exchanges, to join it.
